

Kellogg Co. plans price increases of between 3% and 4% this year on cereals, snacks and other foods in response to the increase in commodity costs. The increase will come from a combination of raising retail prices, curtailing discounts and introducing new items at higher prices, reported The Wall Street Journal. Full Story (WSJ Subscription Required)