

Beef, Veal and Lamb Report

Beef, Veal & Lamb- Beef production last week was 1% less than the same week a year ago. The USDA choice boxed beef index has remained relatively firm due in part to solid retail beef clearance. Pending domestic beef demand could be challenged soon by historically high retail beef prices. Deferred beef sales last week were the smallest for any week since February '11. Softer beef demand could put downward pressure on the beef markets during the next week. Tighter cattle supplies and beef output shortfalls are projected this fall which could bring significant price support to holiday season beef items later this year.

Dairy Report

Dairy- The CME butter market is fairly steady but still 8% above its seasonal bottom established last month. International butter prices are only trading at a slight premium to US butter which shouldn't support solid US butter exports. Still, the 5 year average price move for CME butter is 6.3% higher over the next 13 weeks. The CME cheese block market has moved 9.7% higher from its seasonal bottom in March. History points to steady cheese prices in the coming months but the existing momentum suggests modest cheese price increases in the near term.

Pork Report

Pork- Pork production last week was 5.7% more than last year. Heavier hog weights versus '11 have contributed to strong US pork supplies. Pork output is forecasted by the USDA to track 2.4% above the prior year this summer. This could temper any significant price increases for pork in the coming months. Relatively flat sow slaughter suggests that pork production should continue to expand into '13. Most pork markets have moved upward during the past week with the pork belly market climbing to its highest price level since April 13th.

Poultry Report

Poultry- Chicken output has been trending below year ago levels. Chicken production is projected by the USDA to be down 3.6% this summer compared to last year. This could bring general support to the chicken markets. The chicken breast markets have declined recently following a seasonal trend. History suggests that chicken breast prices can still trend 6% lower over the next 2 weeks. But thereafter, look for chicken breast prices to strengthen as the July 4th holiday approaches and grill demand picks up. Chicken wing prices typically bottom in early June and then increase roughly 17% until year end. It's quite possible that new record high chicken wing prices could be realized later this year.

Seafood Report

Seafood- Chilean salmon output is rebounding from the ISA disease breakout in '07 and is now above pre-ISA salmon production levels. Chile's '12 farmed salmon production is expected to be 16% more than last year. This could bode well for US salmon imports from Chile especially with the rising US dollar making the US an attractive salmon customer. Salmon prices may remain below year ago levels this summer.

Produce Report

Produce- The main eastern tomato harvest area is shifting northward to northern Florida and the southeastern states. US tomato supplies are expected to improve later this month when the California harvest expands. Mature green tomato prices typically trend lower from early June into July. Iceberg lettuce shipments declined last week due in a large part to the Memorial Day holiday. Lettuce supplies from Salinas CA are expect to increase with new crops being harvested. The Idaho potato markets usually trend seasonally higher in coming months but then peak in the late summer.
