

McDonald's to expand sandwich customization option in five states

By Michael Fielding on 12/9/2014

McDonald's is extending the test platform for its customization option to include both chicken and beef to 30 stores in five states, the company confirmed to Meatingplace.

With the new option, customers order their food from kiosks, customizing everything from the bun to the toppings.

Available to order inside restaurants only, each order will be delivered to customers by a server, directly to their table. The food is presented open-faced in metal baskets.

The chain's "Create Your Taste" customization option, currently is being tested in some of its California locations. Through early 2015, the test will expand to approximately 30 restaurants in California, Illinois, Wisconsin, Georgia, Missouri and Pennsylvania.

Toppings include: American cheese, natural sharp white Cheddar and natural pepper jack cheese, buttered and toasted artisan roll and bakery style bun, Big Mac special sauce, spicy mayo, creamy garlic sauce, sweet BBQ sauce, preservative-free guacamole, jalapeños, grilled mushrooms, thick cut Applewood smoked bacon, crisp red onion, caramelized grilled onions, chili lime tortilla strips and crinkle-cut pic